

PAN ON PLANET EARTH

All that exists in the solar system of which planet Earth is a part, and in the countless realms and dimensions beyond, is presently moving through a major shift. This you refer to as the movement from the Piscean era to the Aquarian era. Earth is not an out-of-step planet struggling within an in-step universe to reach the level of perfection that surrounds it. It is quite a common thing for the humans on Earth to perceive themselves as lesser, behind in development, and out of step. This very notion is what one may call “Piscean” in its dynamic. It sets up the planet and those souls who are choosing to experience the lessons of form in a parent/child situation—the universe being the parent, the planet and its inhabitants being the child. The continuous sense of the child striving and moving forward toward the all-knowing parent was an important dynamic of the Piscean era and a dynamic which was played out in one way or another on every level of interaction on Earth. The notion of the parent served as the impetus to keep the child moving forward in the hope that one day, after much work and growth, the child would attain a peer position with the parent.

The parent/child concept has not been exclusive to Earth. It is a dynamic that has been part of reality on all other dimensions and levels. And as already stated, has been an important dynamic of the Piscean era for souls on all levels to come to grips with in whatever manner needed. I point this out to emphasize that Earth is an acknowledged and respected part of an ever-evolving whole and not the bastard child of that whole.

The important lesson to be integrated into the picture of reality from the parent/child dynamic was the conscious, personal dedication of the individual to move forward. The parent dynamic stood before the child within all and encouraged those vital steps toward the perceived notion of perfection represented by the parent. It served to weave into the individual's fabric of life that continuous sense of constant forward motion and the knowing that its resulting change led to better and greater.

NATURE'S INSIGHTS: FROM INSECTS TO PLANET EARTH

Now, although the parent/child dynamic has been a tangible force that has permeated the levels of reality during the Piscean era, the actual notion of all being the child seeking to move toward a parent has been illusion. It is how a Piscean dynamic was translated into a workable reality. An impulse was released within all levels of reality some two thousand years ago, and each individual receiving the impulse translated it into an understandable, tangible concept. The main thrust of the overall translation on planet Earth has been the parent/child dynamic. There has been, in fact, no parent outside or beyond who has enticed and encouraged the children forward. Just as the child is within all, so, too, is the parent. But in order to develop the tools one needs to move forward in confidence, individuals needed to establish that sense of the all-knowing parent standing before them, ready to catch, comfort and receive them as they take those shaky steps forward.

I have not forgotten to address the planet Earth. I needed to lay the foundation for you to understand how the principles presented in this book fit into the larger picture—and that includes Earth.

When the impulse of what I have referred to as “the parent/child dynamic” was released throughout reality, it was received not only by individual human souls, but by the planet itself. I have stated that the impulse was sounded on all levels of reality. In order for there to be harmonious evolution, there must be a sense of movement in concert within the whole. The impulse was received and seated within planet Earth, which in turn, stabilized the seating of the impulse within individuals. As humans translated that impulse into the workable parent/child dynamic, that translation itself seated into the planet and its various natural forms, thus modifying the original impulse to conform to the translation. This is natural law. Form conforming to the energy within. It is a necessary part of the support system between spirit and matter. One cannot have the spirit reflecting one reality seated within a form energized by another reality. It would be as if two horses were hitched to one another but pulling in opposite directions. There would be no chance of forward movement. Form must conform in order for there to be mutual support and evolution between matter and spirit.

To broaden this picture even more, let me say that the impulse and the translation of the impulse, as with all the Piscean impulses and their translations, placed the individuals and the planet squarely and solidly into the evolutionary picture of its universe as a whole—not out of step from it. As already stated, the planet has been an active participant in understanding and working with what we might call “contemporary issues,” for the issues have been the same throughout reality, only the translations have differed. It has been vital that the specific parent/child translation, for example, be fully explored and understood by those on Earth so that the resulting knowledge could be made accessible to the whole. Likewise, other translations of the very same impulse have been made accessible to the whole and have been received at various times throughout the Piscean era by individuals and the intelligences of nature on Earth.

Now a new set of impulses has been sounded throughout reality, and they are the impulses commonly referred to as “Aquarian.” All of reality has moved into a period of transition. The impulses are in the process of being fully seated in and translated everywhere. On Earth, we have full reception of the initial Aquarian impulses. They are seated well within the planet and are now serving the shift of those living on the planet from Piscean to Aquarian.

If you have followed my train of thought, you will realize that with the planet itself holding the Aquarian impulses, all that exists on the planet and all its individuals are not only receiving the similar impulses but the impetus and support from the planet to change as well. This means that those translations and the resulting systems and procedures from the old simply will not function as smoothly in the present. The soul energy of the planet has shifted and no longer correlates with the old form translations that exist on its surface. You will see a rapid deterioration of all that has worked so well in the past. New translations are required. New systems and procedures. The planet is already holding the new impulses.

The co-creative gardening technique is a translation of the new. It works because it once again aligns spirit and matter with parallel intent and purpose. In this case, one could say we have a double alignment. We have the human spirit translating impulse into new form and action, and we have the reconnection of the human spirit with the new impulses contained within the planet around him. As you incorporate these translations into thought and action, you will see evidence of effortless change all around you. As already stated, this is because the intent of spirit and the intent of matter are realigning and once again moving in concert.

This brings me back to the parent/child notion of the Piscean era. One of the translations of this dynamic by humans has been in the arena of nature. That is, humans have tended to look at nature either as the parent looking at a child in need of discipline, or the child seeking beneficial aid and assistance from the powerful and all-knowing parent. In essence, humans have translated the parent/child dynamic in nature as either manipulation or worship. Both translations were working, viable frameworks for learning, but they are now no longer workable. For humans to continue attempting to respond and act within these two old mindsets is wreaking havoc on the planet itself.

With the Aquarian dynamic, the parent/child is uniting as one balanced, integrated force within the individual. It is the uniting of the universal wisdom contained within all and the absolute knowledge that in order to have full conscious access to that universal wisdom, one must continue to move forward in the learning and changing mode. The parent and child come together in balanced, equal partnership.

The co-creative garden translates this fundamental Aquarian dynamic into the arena of nature. Human and nature come together in conscious, equal partnership, both functioning from a position of wisdom and change. Wherever such a garden is initiated, it will immediately sound a note outward into the universe and inward into the core of the planet, the very soul of the planet, that the shift from Piscean to Aquarian dynamics within the nature arena is in the process of changing. And immediately, the evolving intent of the garden will be aligned with the prevailing universal flow and the corresponding planetary impulses, one buttressing from above, the other buttressing from below within the planet. The result will be forward motion in tandem—the gardener in tandem with his planet and his universe. With this massive support, it is no wonder the co-creative garden works.

Allow me to give you another insight. The Aquarian impulses are already seated within the planet. Visualize, if you will, the planet as a container of these impulses. Energy held beneath the Earth's surface. This energy is seated within the very soul of the planet, seated within its heart. It is there to be released and integrated into all levels of life on the planet. Now, picture one small co-creative garden on the planet's surface. See it as a window into the interior of the planet, into its soul. As the gardener works to align this garden to the new dynamics, watch the window open and the energy contained within the core of the planet gently gravitate to and release through the window. Feel the sense of relief and freedom within the Earth's core as the energy moves outward and up. And watch the actions and the form living on the Earth's surface suddenly shift to reflect the impact of the heart energy that has now surfaced. That which exists on the surface has begun to connect to and integrate with the heart and soul of the planet, which, in turn, is fully aligned with the heart and soul force of the universe. As with the experience the human has when he consciously shifts his perceptions in such a way that the heart energy he holds deep within is suddenly released and allowed to surface, so, too, will Earth release its energy as each person opens the window through the framework of the co-creative garden to the heart and soul energy of the planet.

It is not enough to move about the planet in a state of benevolent love for it. This human state alone will not create the passageways through which the heart energy of the planet is allowed to release. It must be accomplished through the state of the human mind and consciousness, combined with parallel and appropriate action. Once released, the heart energy from the planet will permeate all living reality upon its surface and support the evolutionary process of the planet and its inhabitants in tandem movement with the universe into the Aquarian era.

I fully understand that I am aligning deep planetary change and universal movement with the actions of one gardener tending one small garden. This is precisely what I mean to do. One need not wait for group consensus in such matters. One need only move forward, sound the note for change, and follow that intonation with parallel action. Each gardener, in the role of the Knower, shall hold the seed to his heart and shall plant this seed in the earth. The fruit of this plant shall be the winged and shafted Sun above his head, and a new kingdom shall be grounded on Earth. This I can promise you. This is what awaits you.
